DISCOURSE.

“WE have thought of thy loving-kindness, O God, in the midst of thy temple.”—PSALM 48 : 9.

CALLED to-day, in the providence of God, to perform our last religious service in the house which our fathers built for us, and in which both they and we have passed so many happy Sabbaths, I have thought the event worthy of some fitting memorial. The passage just quoted seems suited to give a profitable direction to our meditations.

In the verse next preceding the text, the Psalmist says: “As we have heard, so have we seen in the city of the Lord of hosts, the city of our God; God will establish it forever.” The City of God here spoken of is Jerusalem—regarded not merely as a town, but as the seat of the Theocracy and the residence of the Lord of hosts. Now, as the literal Jerusalem was in the fullness of time to be overthrown and utterly destroyed, the “city of the Lord” must here represent the Church of God, the spiritual Jerusalem, of which the earthly Jerusalem was only a type. It is the city whose walls are salvation, and concerning which God has said that “the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.” As we have heard in the promise, so have we seen in the accomplishment, and we are witnesses for God that he is true and faithful; or, if what has been learned is in the way of tradition, or of the history of God's dealings with his people in earlier days, it is equally true that "as we have thus heard, so have we also seen." Our fathers trusted in God, and he delivered them; and we their children, so far as we have cherished their faith, have had equal occasion to proclaim the divine faithfulness. We have delightful evidence that Satan shall not triumph over the Church; God has established her forever, even to all generations. Now, the Psalmist adds in the text: We have pondered this, both the past and the present. "We have thought of thy loving-kindness, O God, in the midst of thy temple." I infer from this, that the church, or the house of God—for the Greek word from which church is derived warrants its application to the building—is the appropriate place for thankfully recounting God's loving-kindnesses. Preëminently is it the place for calling to mind those which we have here, on this very spot, experienced; and, my brethren, if we are ever to perform this duty, as pleasing as it is sacred, we must seize on the present opportunity. I doubt not that there are numbers here with whom this is a spiritual as well as a natural impulse; for all the members of this church now living have in this sacred place openly professed their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. You have here enjoyed precious privileges, and great personal mercies, and it falls in with all your best feelings gratefully to acknowledge them. You are ready to say: We remember and rejoice in thy kindness, O God, in the midst of thy temple.

Yes, brethren, for this very purpose we have come up to-day to the courts of the Lord, the sanctuary, where two generations have, through all the Sabbaths of sixty years, resorted for religious instruction, prayer, and praise. The word here translated "I have thought," describes the act of meditation, with a view to comparing things—as one state with another. Hence, the special fitness of the text for my present purpose. I wish to show forth the loving-kindness of God by this very method. For this end, I propose a brief review of historical facts—facts already familiar to some of you, but which are not so to all, and especially to the young of the congregation. The statements here made are, in part, the same which were given at the laying of the corner-stone of the new church edifice, a copy of which was deposited in it.

You are aware of the imperfection of our early records, both as a church and an ecclesiastical society. Tradition reports that the Proprietors' records were destroyed during the confusion and violence of the Revolutionary War.* We should have been great gainers if our fathers had early introduced the present practice of semi-centennial celebrations.

Had there been such a commemoration of the founding of this church, it would have occurred, as we believe, in 1755—about the middle of the ministry of Abraham Todd. Suppose that on this occasion he had preached and published a discourse, giving a history of the town and of the first and second Congregational churches—that is, the original Church, and this off-shoot from it—how great the satisfaction we should all feel in this document, and in the facts it would have saved from oblivion. Think of the value of his statement in regard to the condition of these churches during the long interval, now almost a blank, and especially during the "great awakening," as it was called, of 1740. Of that wonderful religious movement he was an eye and ear-witness. He could then, fifteen years after its occurrence, have calmly reviewed its facts and justly estimated its results.

The first settlement of this town was, as nearly as can be ascertained, about 1650, ten years after its purchase from the Indians. So much, at least, is known that, as early as 1656, complaints were made to the government of the New-Haven Colony that Greenwich—which, though temporarily drawn away to the Dutch government at New-York, was originally purchased for New-Haven—was the theater of disorders demanding the intervention of the civil authority. Some years later, on the union of the New-Haven Colony with Connecticut, the latter extended its sway over the town—the good effects of which were immediately visible.

In 1665, Greenwich and Rye are mentioned as places in which no churches were organized, or pastors settled, and as enjoying only occasional preaching. The earliest records of this Ecclesiastical Society are blended with those of the town—the town, according to the custom of those days, assuming all responsibility in relation to religious matters, building churches, settling pastors, and setting apart property for the support of the Gospel, and exercising complete control over ministers and congregations.

In March, 1682, the town, by their vote, directed that a number of home lots should be laid out at Horseneck,* but at the same time forbid the occupants from seeking any organization, civil or religious, separate from the town. Twelve years later, 1694, the town voted to build a new meeting-house, 32 by 26, which vote, however, does not seem to have been carried into effect.* Nearly at the same time there began to be dissensions between the inhabitants on the two sides of the river about the maintenance of worship on this side. Two years later, in 1696, Salmon Treat was called to settle in the town, with a provision for his preaching every third Sabbath at Horseneck—the first recognition of this place as entitled to preaching; but he did not accept the call. Early in 1699, by vote of the town, a home lot was granted for a parsonage at Horseneck. The Rev. Joseph Morgan, the next minister, is believed to have come here in the autumn of 1696. He preached at first on both sides of the river, as it had been contemplated Mr. Treat should do; but it soon created dissatisfaction. The Proprietors of the town say by vote that "Mr. Morgan preaching part of the time at Horseneck is a damage to them, and takes away their religious privileges."† Mr. Morgan continued the minister of the town four years, till May, 1700. He then left the settlement east of the Mianus, and assigned as a reason the want of union among the people. He seems after that to have labored on this side of the river, as we find the inhabitants bestowing upon him, in January, 1705, some special privileges. On the 5th of March following, the town was by vote divided into two societies; and here we suppose that we find the true date of the founding of this church. After this Mr. Morgan continued its pastor, till he was dismissed, October, 1708, by vote of the town, whether with or without any other formalities does not appear.*

* This is understood to be in the East Settlement, now called Old Greenwich; and it may here be noted that in all early votes the town describes this settlement, then the seat of power.

† They add: "We think it convenient to give Mr. Morgan acquaintance that we would not have him preach at Horseneck, but continue in the town."

It has been thought that the dismissal of Mr. Morgan was the last action of the town in ecclesiastical affairs. There were, however, votes of the town in 1709 and 1711 for providing a parsonage for the West Society; and also a vote in 1713, assigning a location for their church, which was near the site we now occupy. Three years later, December, 1716, we find the town holding a meeting in the new house, which shows that the building is erected, and so far advanced toward completion as to be occupied. It also indicates that the center of population was changing from the east to the west side of the river. We ascertain then, with tolerable certainty, the following facts: That on the 5th of March, 1705, the two congregations became distinct by mutual agreement. Of course, we must presume that this church was at that time regularly organized, with Joseph Morgan for its acting pastor. Its first house of worship was built by the town eleven years afterwards, in 1716. Its erection was voted through a series of years, from 1694 to 1713; the building itself, however, meanwhile made no progress. It would be difficult to say at what time

* The event here mentioned took place one hundred and fifty years since—a period so far remote as to render it not improper to introduce an amusing incident suited to illustrate those early times. We find on the records of the town a very significant vote. In January, 1705, the inhabitants in the West Settlement had granted Mr. Morgan, to aid in his support, a tide-mill—now owned by Mr. S. Davis. Three years after this, Ebenezer Mead, Joshua Knapp, and Caleb Knapp were sent to him as a committee, “to see if he would cease tending his mill in person, and provide a miller, so that he might attend to the people;” and if he would not, the process for relief was to be of a summary character: “The committee were to consider the pulpit vacant, and at once proceed to provide another minister.”

its foundations were actually laid; probably, however, it was soon after the vote of 1713, which fixed its site between the dwellings of Joseph Close and Ephraim Palmer. That house stood from 1716 to January 7, 1799, a period of eighty-two years. During the latter part of this time it was in a very dilapidated state. At length the house we are now in was covered, and by the removal of the seats from the old house to the new, was prepared so as to be occupied. It was dedicated January 7, 1799, by the then pastor, Isaac Lewis, Sen. His discourse on that occasion was founded on Genesis 28 : 17 : " And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place. This is none other than the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." * Every thing shows that the old building had become unsightly and uncomfortable, and that it had been used to the last moment. Hence the hurry of the removal. The building was finished three years afterwards; the funds for that purpose being raised by tax. The first renting of the pews † was December, 1802. The rental amounted to about $100. The whole cost of the church is thought to have been not far from $6000—a heavier tax upon the property of the congregation than $50,000 would be now.

There are some here to-day that remember that first meeting-house of 1716. There are others who would give a good deal to see a correct drawing of it.‡ But

* The preacher's stand on that occasion was a joiner's bench, with the front of the old pulpit placed before him. The day was stormy, and the congregation is thought to have numbered only about one hundred.

† The pews joined upon the walls. The slips were free for many years.

‡ The building stood in front of the western part of the new stone church—was a little the longest east and west—had square whatever it was, in shape or architecture, I dare say that the men and women who built it gave as liberally and bore their burdens as cheerfully as we do—making fair allowance for their circumstances. I said I would like to get a sight of that early edifice, but I should be still more gratified if I might be permitted to look in upon the first congregation that used to assemble in it for worship. I would gladly listen to the preaching of that day, to their prayers, and to the songs of Zion which they were wont to sing. That house as to size, architecture, cost, and finish, doubtless contrasted strongly with this; so also, and perhaps still more, as to numbers, dress, and general style and appearance, did the congregation of worshippers. Some of the early settlers in this State were by no means in narrow circumstances. They were well to do in the world; but it was otherwise with the great body of the people. It was so here, and especially in respect to money. The dress and equipage of the people was much less expensive than ours.* Moreover, around the church of 1716, pews all around the sides, and two on each side of the middle aisle. The stairs leading to the gallery were in the front corners of the house. There was a door in front, and one on each side, according to the fashion of those days; it was without turret or belfry, and had no paint to boast of, save that the pulpit was of a bluish color, and it did not lack the sounding-board, that indispensable aid granted to the favored preachers of that early day.

* On this point, it is stated that, in the winter, it was not uncommon to see in the sanctuary the checkered woolen shirt and the bandana handkerchief around the neck. In the summer, numbers of the men came without coats, or freely threw them off, if the weather was oppressive.

In regard to the pecuniary ability of the congregation, we have a significant fact touching a period of its history somewhat latter. At the close of the Revolution, the Society owed £30 lawful money. It was believed that the amount in money was not in the Society which, if now standing, would be one hundred and forty-two years old, instead of an array of some forty covered carriages for the comfort of as many families going to and returning from the house of God, and costing much more than the church itself did, you would not have seen a solitary one; but, instead, you might have found a goodly number of saddled and pillioned horses, and probably in extreme weather or bad traveling, a few vehicles drawn by the faithful ox. I have never seen any very new region of our country, East or West, where this mode of conveyance was not occasionally resorted to to reach the sanctuary. Then, again, instead of the crowded house we are accustomed to see every pleasant Sabbath, you would have found in a smaller and plainer audience-room a moderate congregation; and at this season of the year, colder in those days than now, and without any arrangements for warming, I suspect you would have seen not only a thin but a shivering congregation.

Who preached the Gospel to the people at the time referred to—1716—if known at all, is known only by tradition. There is no record either of the town or of the church to establish that point. It is quite certain that there was no settled pastor from 1708 till 1717. From the latter year to 1726 it would seem from indirect evidence that the Rev. Richard Sackett was acting pastor of this society. How the pulpit was supplied, or whether regularly supplied at all, through that long interval of nine years, from the dismissal of Mr. Morgan and could not be raised. In this exigency a public-spirited mechanic chartered a sloop, loaded it with his manufactures, and by trading on both sides of the Sound easterly, raised the money and paid off the debt. At that time it is said Bridgeport contained but three houses.

to the introduction of Mr. Sackett, does not appear. The Rev. Nathaniel Bowers became the minister of the first church, as successor of Mr. Morgan, and continued there till 1710—two years after Mr. Morgan vacated this church—and after his dismissal that church appears to have been left without a pastor through a series of years. It was hard to obtain ministers at that period. New settlements demanding the Gospel were multiplying more rapidly than preachers, though both Harvard and Yale Colleges were beginning to train up a few well-educated and evangelical men. Moreover, in those times of struggle with poverty, it was as difficult to support ministers as it was to secure their labors; for feeble congregations had no such Home Missionary aids as our destitute settlements can now command.

Rev. Stephen Munson was the next pastor; he was installed June 29, 1728. There is no record of the number or the names of the members of the church at his settlement. He continued the pastor about five years—the last record made by him being in December, 1733. During his ministry the church records show that twenty-nine members were added to the church in full communion.

Rev. Mr. Munson was succeeded by Rev. Abraham Todd, whose ministry began in 1733—4 and closed in 1773, embracing about forty years—the longest ministry the church has ever enjoyed.

Mark, now, God's providential kindness to this community in multiplying their numbers and increasing their strength. The early settlers, few in numbers, came chiefly from the more easterly portions of the State; but those who began the settlement of this part of the town were, at no distant period, able to say almost, in the words of Jacob, "We passed over this

Jordan"—this Mianus—"with our staff, and we have become two bands." The increase of our population, compared with other more central points, has not, it is true in later years, been rapid; yet it has been steady—particularly for the last ten years—and this, too, in the absence of all effort to attract it. With such efforts as have been made in many other places, it might easily have been doubled. As the population has increased, so also has this congregation. You have sent off to other churches more members than you have received from others; and at one time, 1827, you dismissed twenty-seven to form the church at North-Greenwich; yet you were not sensibly weakened. "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth." Their places were soon supplied. There had been accessions from the world in 1823; and in 1828 another ingathering was realized, which more than repaired all losses by death and dismission. Thus the church not only continued strong, but increased in strength: and there never has been, it is believed, at any former period of your history, so many persons among us who desire church sittings, as at the present time. Certainly there were never so many who are in need of them. Old Greenwich was the mother settlement and church; but through the arrangements of Providence, the daughter has not only secured a position in advance of the mother, but of all immediately contiguous religious communities. You do not claim that this is through your wisdom or enterprise. It is God's hand and counsel. So also in respect to resources. Probably the first house of worship that was here dedicated to God, 1716, sixty-six years after the first settlement of the town, cost only some fifteen hundred dollars; but, as already intimated, I doubt not that in accomplishing the work of church erection then, the burdens bore heavier upon the givers than the burdens of our present effort, costly as it is, do upon the same class now. At that early period more persons than now had to give till they felt it; and so it was when this house was built, although then there had been a greater increase in pecuniary means than the advanced outlay—greater than the augmented demand on those means, by the increased cost of the new structure. So Solomon's temple cost a thousand-fold more than the tabernacle; but the latter was built in the wilderness by a company, not unlike our Pilgrim Fathers, of poor refugees from oppression; the former—the glorious temple on Mount Zion—by a great, prosperous, and well-established people. In both cases God required liberality. But the change in Israel's resources was scarcely greater during the long interval—about fifteen hundred years—between those two enterprises, than the lapse of less than a century and a half has made in the resources of this community. We can not fully realize this change. It outruns all our calculations and every just conception. There are private dwellings in this congregation, built and paid for by the owners, without embarrassment and without serious interference with invested funds—which the whole parish, if taxed to raise for a church in 1716, would have felt to be an oppressive burden. I know this by what I have seen of the efforts of religious societies in similar settlements both East and West—efforts to build houses of worship much less expensive than the private dwellings of which I speak. Some of the congregations to which I allude, were neither very weak in numbers or in resources—save in money. I have known such congregations attempt to build a house costing one thousand dollars; and when they had done their utmost, there were some two hundred dollars that must be cash, and it could not be raised—nothing would buy it. The work must stop, or the money must be begged from older settlements. But, brethren, I am reminded that in respect to religious societies, numbers and wealth, though they have their place and their value, are not after all the chief elements of moral power. That power lies in the character of the people, of the members of the association. The church is ordinarily first formed, and becomes the nucleus and centre of the organization, in fact its living principle. This is so in all prosperous religious societies. If you would study the history and success of the one, you must study them through the facts of the other.

In our day it is fashionable with a certain class of so-called liberal writers and speakers to make light of the Church, as well of the ministry, as a moral power; yet I challenge such to show me a solitary instance in this land where an ecclesiastical society has continued permanently to flourish, either without a church or when the church connected with it has been suffered to languish. I have known a few cases where orthodox churches have, from some cause, run completely down and died out; but in no case has stated public worship long survived the catastrophe. If there is any exception, it is when the parish has had invested funds with which preaching has been sustained, with little or no tax upon the worshipers. Your prosperity and strength as a religious society, then, has chiefly turned on God's great and distinguishing mercy to this church. Of its history, previous to the close of our Revolutionary War, we have, as already intimated, very meager details. During the long ministry of Rev. Abraham Todd, embracing the great revival of 1740, no church records, or next to none, now appear. There is no record of any admissions to the church, or baptisms, save a solitary one.* Doubtless there were admissions during that revival; but we know that many of the ministers of Connecticut were either doubtful of the work and stood aloof, or were openly opposed. And at New-Haven, and in this direction from New-Haven, the opposition was the most general and decided. Probably the pastor here stood in doubt, and did not take strong hold of the work; and if so, no great results could have been realized. In respect to this people, we learn from tradition some of the evils and disorders that the excitement engendered; of the benefits, greater or less, which it produced, we find no memorial. That the church did not gain strength as some churches did, is certain.†

Rev. Jonathan Murdock followed Mr. Todd, having been installed as pastor, 1774, soon after Mr. Todd's dismissal. He continued his ministry eleven years, till 1785. He began with forty-three members, twenty-four males and nineteen females. During his incumbency, nineteen members were added, of whom fourteen were females, so that during the whole period only five male members were added to the church! and for aught that appears, these might have been added by letter. That the church during these eleven years did not gain ground in numbers, is shown by the fact that when Rev. Isaac Lewis, his successor, was settled, there were but forty-seven members. But we must recollect that Mr. Murdock's ministry covers the entire period of our Revolutionary struggle, when there was little else, especially in this region, but disorder, rapine, and distressing exactions.

* There is a record of the renunciation of the Jewish religion, by Abraham Hoyt, March 13, 1737; also two votes of the church—the last 1748.

† While it does not appear that this church was greatly strengthened by that revival, it is known to have strongly agitated many minds, and to have produced some disorders, the effects of which have not even yet wholly disappeared. Some of the best members of this church, of the last generation, holding these disorders, and the number of false conversions in remembrance, had a great horror of night-meetings, so called, considering them inseparable from similar scenes of wildness and of license. The fact seems to be that both then and now, in all real and powerful revivals, as well as in those of more doubtful character, there will be more or less of disorder, unless the people are well instructed in the nature of true religion, and guided by discreet and competent religious teachers.

The marked prosperity, temporal and spiritual, of this church and society, may be said to date from the settlement of the Rev. Isaac Lewis, Sen., October 18th, 1786. His ministry was the longest you have enjoyed, save that of Mr. Todd. By the testimony of all, Dr. Lewis was a great and good man, wise in counsel and faithful in labors. His preaching was plain, impressive, and solemn; and though the period covered by his pastorate was, for the most part, one of general spiritual dearth, yet the church was materially increased in numbers, and still more in strength and general resources.* His ministry was closed at own request, December, 1818. The vacancy occasioned by his resignation was supplied by the settlement of his son, Rev. Isaac Lewis, Jr., on the day that the father was dismissed, December 1st, 1818. Under his ministry, in 1823, there was a powerful work of grace which added many to the church. He was dismissed April 16, 1828. Soon after, in the spring of 1828, another revival was enjoyed. It began in the academy under Mr. Grosvenor's principalship; and through the preaching and labors of Mr. Saxton, as a stated supply for four months, was extended into the succeeding summer—bringing about one hundred souls to Christ and adding about seventy to the church.

* Mr. Lewis was settled over this church at a critical period of its history—1786. Greenwich bordering on New-York, when the city was in the hands of the British troops, was often the theatre of rapine and violence on the part of lawless men. At the close of the War, little was left, save the naked earth. There were peculiar circumstances in Mr. Lewis's settlement marking the presence of God's hand. He united a divided people, and built up a strong religious society. The tide of worldly prosperity set in about 1793, chiefly in connection with the cultivation of the potato, for which the soil proved admirably adapted, and which a near and good market made a most profitable crop, through a series of years.

Rev. Joel Mann was the next pastor. He was installed Sept. 1st, 1830. During his ministry, of about six years, there were several seasons of special religious interest, and large accessions were made to the church. Mr. Mann was dismissed, at his request, August 23d, 1836. His successor was Rev. Noah Coe, who was installed as pastor May 23d, 1837, and continued his ministry till May 20th, 1845. During his ministry about 200 were added to the church; the larger part in the revival of 1839—as the fruits of which, 90 were added to the church.

After the dismissal of Mr. Coe, the pulpit was supplied for about two years, successively by Frederick G. Clark, Rev. Ebenezer Mead, and George Bushnell. There were added to the church during this period, and chiefly under the ministry of Mr. Clark, something over 30 members. My ministry, beginning Dec. 8, 1847, has now extended over eleven years. I have not computed with exactness the additions which have been made to the church during this period; but they will not vary much from 190. About 50 of these have been by letter. The rest have been mostly gathered in as the fruits of three revivals—those of 1850, 1854, and 1858. The church is now larger than at any former period of its history—numbering 333 members. This religious prosperity is by no means what we might have realized, if, as a church, we had been more faithful, but whatever it is, we owe it to the free grace of the Great Head of the Church. He has poured out his Spirit upon this people, in a marked manner, at least eight different times within the last forty years, that is, on an average once every five years. The least number HOPEFULLY converted, at any one of these seasons, is not less than 30; and the greatest number is over 100. In all, it is thought about 700 souls, as the fruits of these successive works of grace, have been turned to God; and about 600 added to the church. What would have been the condition of this church and society to-day, had God in just judgment for our sins, withholden from us the rain of righteousness, and left us like the heath in the desert? Some churches may have been equally prospered, by smaller and yet more frequent spiritual harvests. But in our country, this has not been ordinarily so, with our largest and best churches. They have gained their chief strength, as we have, from revivals. And ought we not to expect that as the latter day glory of the Church draws on, these seasons will be more frequent and their fruits more pure and permanent? If God had not thus poured out upon us his Spirit, no tongue can tell what might ere this have been our condition. Surely we ought to come into his courts to-day with overflowing hearts. We ought to think and talk of “his loving kindness in the midst of his temple.” “What shall we render unto the Lord for all his benefits?” “We will take the cup of salvation, and call on his name.”

This house was first occupied for worship as already stated—1799—twelve years after Dr. Lewis’s pastorate began. In it, the chief strength of his life and ministry was spent; and here he gathered the best fruits of his labors. Under each of his successors there has been one or more powerful works of grace, and nearly all the converts above referred to, were gathered in within these walls, and sat down successively for the first time around the table of the Lord in this house. Does it not impart a kind of sacredness to the place? I confess that the thought of leaving such a spot—the birth-place of so many souls—affects my own mind, and no doubt still more yours, especially since not a few that hear me to-day—though many, alas! are not—were here first baptized with water, and afterwards with the higher baptism of the Holy Ghost. It would not be creditable to you, not to feel on this subject. But remember, brethren, that though many interesting, solemn and joyful things had been done in the tabernacle, and the Lord had filled it with his glory, and there given gracious answers to prayer, so as greatly to endear it to the pious in Israel—yet when the exigencies of his cause and worship required a larger and more costly edifice, and the people were more able to build, the tabernacle must give place to the temple; and the people were called upon to transfer their affections from the former to the latter. As was remarked on a recent occasion, there is rarely a new house of God, built by a society, without its being a trial to some, and especially to the more aged members. Diversities of judgment and feeling also in relation to such a measure, seldom fail to be brought out. It was so, I am assured, to some extent when this house was built, though the necessity for the movement was urgent. In some minds there was opposition, if not to the movement itself, yet to things connected with it. Still there was no schism: and thanks to God, there never has been—in this church and society, so far as I can learn—from the first laying of its foundations in 1705, to this hour. You have had wide differences and earnest debates on various questions; but you have kept together, and soon the differences and troubles have melted away. You have felt it your duty in such cases, to be, as Paul exhorts, in subjection one to another, and to use great forbearance in the spirit of love. Without this spirit, neither Christian churches nor Christian ministers can do much for Christ and his cause. We are at best frail, short-sighted and fallible creatures. Individuals err, and churches and societies err. In State and in Church we consent to be governed by majorities, but majorities may and do err. Still, we have no better rule in all prudential matters, than to follow their lead; and no reasonable man would ask that the rule should be changed. I have learned in a life now considerably extended, and in a field of observation not narrow, that it is not safe where wise and good men differ, as to what is best and most expedient, in prudential matters, and especially where there is more or less feeling enlisted, to be too positive, since in a sober review we often find occasion to revise and change our opinions. This has led me when I have committed a matter of this kind to God, and it is not decided or shaped in the event, to suit me—to hope for the best, and to go forward and do my duty—resting in this, that those whose judgments are at least as trustworthy as my own, may in the end appear to be right, and if not, God can overrule all for good. I therefore study contentment and “the things that make for peace.” This is at least the way to lay off burdens that would crush us—to keep a cheerful spirit and labor for God with unimpaired strength. And now, brethren, I commend you to God and the word of his grace. I feel that the present crisis is not without its embarrassments, and possibly hazards—yet God seems to have shut us up to an advance movement: and when we review your history, and see how mercifully He has dealt with you for more than one hundred and fifty years, how can we help trusting him still; or how help believing, that instead of his having brought you thus far, only that Satan may distract and destroy you—he has done all the great things of the past, only as a pledge of the greater things he will do for you in the future?*

* It seems proper there should be in connection with this Historical Discourse, a brief description of the new house of worship which we are to occupy. The following is believed to be correct.

The site of the building is on the highest point of land on the main road leading from New-York to New-Haven. The plan of the building was prepared by LEOPOLD EIDLITZ, Esq., of New-York, and has been much admired. The entire material is native granite quarried in the near neighborhood, except the corner-stone, which was presented to the society by Mr. MILNE, of Stamford. The edifice is of the Gothic order of architecture. The main audience-room consists of a nave, 104 feet long, and 86 feet wide; transept, 72 feet wide. The nave projects in front some 26 feet beyond the aisles, in which projection, on a platform slightly elevated above the floor, is the choir. The front of the church faces the south, and commands an extended view of Long Island Sound. On the south-west angle, entirely disengaged from the church, but connected with it by a low porch, is a tower and steeple, about 212 feet high. On the south-east angle is a stair-case turret, similarly disengaged, which is 16 feet square. The whole front is 112 feet. The extreme length of the building, including the chapel, is 138 feet from outside to outside. The interior is finished with an open roof, sustained by arched sections, which are supported by a series of posts and attached columns. The windows are of stained glass. The house was dedicated to the worship of the Triune God, Dec. 8, 1858. In the corner-stone of the church were deposited a brief manuscript history of the church, and various other documents.
